Welcome to El Dorado County

El Dorado County spans 1,805 square miles ranging from flatlands to mountains. As the original California Gold Rush center, the strong influence of that time can still be found in abundance from the old mines to the crystal clear waterways that miners used to pan for gold. The county seat, Placerville, is nicknamed "Hangtown." On the eastern end, Lake Tahoe is known the world over for its scenic beauty and tourist amenities.

Ideally situated close to "civilization," the county offers a vigorous mixture of urban and country, and it's easy to find a home site anywhere between the two extremes. The city of Sacramento is a 30 minute drive from population centers of Western El Dorado County. Lake Tahoe is an hour East, and San Francisco is approximately 2 hours to the West.

Folsom Lake provides a boating environment and there are a good number of mountain lakes and camping opportunities throughout the County.

On the Western slope, the climate is dry and warm; winter averages are 40-65 degrees, summer 85-95 degrees. Rain is usually modest in the winter; and golf tends to be a year round past time. At Lake Tahoe, the winter sets in with heavy snows and the kind of natural beauty and climate found only in the high mountains. In the summer, Lake Tahoe is warm, balmy, and dry.

The crime rate is only 20% of the statewide average, reflecting an important part of the spirit of the people who live here.

Schools average far above national and state test score standards, reflecting a strong cooperation between parents and their local governments. Many of the schools score in the top ten percent of statewide tests.

Real estate has appreciated well, avoiding the extreme ups and downs of the heavily populated coastal areas. In the years to come, El Dorado County's modest growth environment will serve to maintain the excellent investment potential. On the average, homes in the county are very affordable, compared to other California population centers. Now is an excellent time to invest in the county. Opportunities range from the custom homes in Serrano to the rural life on a large ranch. It's easy to find acreage featuring oaks, pines and views of local mountains or the Sacramento Valley.

El Dorado County is truly a diversified environment.

Shingle Springs/Cameron Park

About Shingle Springs

Originally an early, bustling, California gold mining settlement, Shingle Springs has taken on the character of a peaceful country community with ranches and homes on acreage. The area was riddled with rich placer mines, yielding up to $200 per rocker per day. With the discovery of gold came people and the first general store in 1865. As claims failed, the miners moved on, but cattle ranchers and farmers saw the value in these hills and continued to support the area. The first post office was established on February 3, 1853, and in 1866 the Sacramento Valley Railroad was extended to Shingle Springs. As a railroad terminus, the town boomed with trains and stages departing daily. It became one of the busiest business centers in the Golden State.

In 1867, the railroad found a new route through Auburn. Some area residents moved on, but many decided to stay and establish Shingle Springs as a permanent community. On May 11, 1865, the name was changed to Shingle, until 1955, when it again became Shingle Springs.

About Cameron Park

Cameron Park is a relatively new community in a county where gold was discovered in 1848 to set the stage for the California Gold Rush. Visionary Larry Cameron purchased the 5000 foothill acres that now encompass Cameron Park in the 50's for ranching purposes. Slowly, with the help of others, he divided the land into lots of varying sizes. Cameron Park reflects a wide scope of interests, with ranch sized properties, medium and high density residential, shopping areas, a championship country club, recreational lake and the Airpark Estates. The Cameron Airpark Estates provides a unique opportunity for pilots to commute from home to destination without ever leaving the plane. Wide streets double as taxiways between homes and the airstrip.

Some glimpses of the past can also be found; grinding rocks and burial mounds of the Niesnan branch of the Maidu Indians are still visible. For another look at past endeavors, some structures of the Skinner Winery from 1865 can be seen at the corner of Green Valley Road and Cameron Park Drive. Cameron Park was conceived as a community to meet many needs and continues to strive for that goal.

Placerville (“Hangtown”)

The story of old Hangtown really begins at Coloma, where James Marshall built a sawmill on the South Fork of the American River for his employer John Sutter. On January 24, 1848, Marshall discovered flecks of gold in the tail race of the mill, and when the news spread, the great Gold Rush began.

Up ravines and over hills miners and merchants, soldiers and seamen scrambled throughout the area. By the summer of ‘48, more than a thousand men were working the ground at the new camp, which soon placed Coloma as the initial rendezvous for the Argonauts. But not all the newcomers were interested in gathering their share of the plentiful wealth by such back-breaking labor. Murders and robberies became frequent in isolated camps along the American River, and before long, several merchants and miners had lost their poke of gold at knife point.

After one such crime early in 1849, an impromptu citizens’ jury met to consider the fate of the three accused. The jury wasted little time reaching a verdict. Then the question was asked, “What shall be done with them?” Someone shouted, “Hang them!” The majority were in agreement. And so it was that the first known hanging in the Mother Lode that was carried out. The site was a giant white oak in the corner of hay yard near the center of town. The word spread quickly and Old Dry Diggins soon became known as Hangtown due to several other hangings. (It was called Dry Diggins because the miners had to cart the dry soil down to the running water to wash out the gold). Today, only the tree stump remains, hidden in the cellar of a bar on Main Street in Placerville named -quite aptly - “The Hangman’s Tree.”

By 1854, Hangtown had become the third largest town, surpassed only by San Francisco and Sacramento. Los Angeles was in 15th place with a mere 541 voters. With the increasing population came a temperance league, a Methodist Episcopal church and agitation for a less morbid name. Placerville had been suggested as early as 1850. It was official when the city was incorporated in 1854. The same year, an election was held to try to wrestle the county seat of government away from Coloma, but Placerville was not the only competitor. Three other communities joined in the running. None of the rivals came up with enough votes to upset Coloma.

Two years later, Placerville tried again, and this time the contest was limited to just the two towns. Again, the official vote showed Coloma the victor, but a group of indignant Placerville citizens called a meeting to air their suspicions of ballot box stuffing and election fraud. Apparently, the evidence supporting the charges was sufficient to convince the State Legislature to settle the matter once and for all. So, by an act of the Legislature, the county seat was moved to Placerville 1857.

On July 6, 1856, Placerville was nearly destroyed by a fire, and as local mining declined, Placerville gained new life from the Comstock silver strike in Nevada in 1859. Throughout the 1850’s Placerville had been the western terminus for the Overland Trail. The year 1859 saw the new beginning of a massive reverse migration. From 1859 to 1866, the Placerville-Carson Road (later U.S. Highway 50 was built) witnessed the greatest era of freighting and staging by horse-drawn vehicles ever known. Due to dispute with the railroad, the City of Placerville disbanded in 1873 and incorporated again in 1900.

Today Placerville remains the hub of the Mother Lode. The industry has turned from mining to lumber, agriculture, light manufacturing, tourism and recreation and is famous for its vineyards and production of fine wines. Placerville remains the location of the offices of the El Dorado County government, but when the city and its rich history are recalled, it is the colorful name of Hangtown which has endured.

South Lake Tahoe

"I ascended today the highest peak... from which we had a beautiful view of a mountain lake at our feet, about 15 miles in length, and so nearly surrounded by mountains that we could not discover an outlet." Wrote John C. Fremont, on the sunny morning of February 14, 1844.

The discovery was accidental: Fremont was searching for the mythical "Buenaventura River" described to the area by some early geographers, and shown variously on regional maps as flowing into the Gulf of Mexico or San Francisco Bay.

Winter was not an auspicious time of year to travel the Sierra and Fremont's party had suffered severe hardships. Washoe Indian guides warned that no man had ever crossed the barrier in winter, and described the range as consisting of "Rock on rock... snow on snow."

The discovery was a great morale-booster for the exploration party of 36 men, now in extremely bad physical shape and without a single sound pack animal. Just the night before, Fremont had written in his journal, "We had tonight an extraordinary meal...pea soup, mule and dog". From his first vantage point at the 10,000-foot level of what was probably either Steven's or Red Lake Peak, Fremont turned his eyes to the west, and there saw the sought-after pass. In his excitement at locating a way across the forbidding heights, Fremont neglected to name the magnificent lake he had discovered, but struck on with his exhausted party through the pass and down the south fork canyon of the American River to Sutter's Fort. The rigors of the journey can be better understood by considering the loss of all but 33 of his 67 pack animals, and though he did not lose a single man, two lapsed into insanity, unable to accept the monumental deprivation.

After his arrival at Sutter's Fort on March 8, Fremont wrote (as follows) of the 16-day journey from Carson Pass. "A more forlorn and pitiable (sight) than they presented cannot well be imagined. They were all on foot, each man weak and emaciated, leading a horse or mule as weak and emaciated as themselves. They had experienced great difficulty in descending the mountains, made slippery by rains and snows, and many horses fell over precipices and were killed...out of 67 animals with which we commenced crossing the Sierra, only 33 reached the valley out of the Sacramento, and they only in a condition to be led along."

Fremont left it to Mark Twain to wax lyrical on the subject of the lake's startling beauty, but he did rectify his earlier omission and designated it "Lake Bonpland" on his post-exploration maps of the region. Bonpland never came into general usage, however, nor did the other name, "Mountain Lake," also attributed to Fremont and shown on a few of his regional charts. By 1853 the lake's location was well enough established to enable the new State of California's official mapmaker to locate it with certain accuracy and name it...for some unknown reason..."Lake Bigler" in honor of the third governor of California, John Bigler. Both California and Nevada adopted the name, at least officially, but it rested uneasily on the crown jewel of the Sierra and in 1861 an attempt was made to change the name again, this time to the somewhat fanciful title "Tula Tulia". For better or worse, the effort failed and "Lake Bigler" remained in general use until late in 1862 when William Henry Knight, an early and wholehearted admirer of the basin, left the name Bigler off geological survey maps of the region he was preparing, and began a crusade to adopt the name Tahoe, the Indian name then most commonly accepted. As Knight explained, "I remarked (to many) that people had expressed dissatisfaction with the name "Bigler", bestowed in honor of a man who had not distinguished himself by any single achievement, and I thought now would be a good time to select an appropriate name and fix it forever on that beautiful sheet of water". And so it was that "Tahoe" appeared for the first time, at Knight's request, on federal maps issued from the Land Office in Washington, D.C. in 1862.

El Dorado County: Demographics

Demographic indicators explain the characteristics of human populations and population segments, and are especially helpful when used to identify consumer markets. This information can be beneficial to businesses and governments in defining the demand or need for specific products and services in the area.

Between 1994 and 2004, population increased 18.5% in El Dorado County.

The quality of life in the Sierra Nevada Foothills is luring people away from Sacramento. In fact, El Dorado County, has seen its population nearly triple from 6,395 in 1990 to 18,083 in 2000. That is an increase of 183 percent in ten years. This population surge is driven by the desire for a higher quality of life and the convenience of close proximity to Sacramento.

El Dorado County is currently home to nearly 168,100 people, with a projected population of 195,000 by 2015. This projection is supported by the fact that population increase has been steady for the last ten years, with an average annual increase of 3,420 people (2.2 percent).

Between 1994 and 2004, the total population increased 18.5% in the county. This steady increase is due to a greater number of births than deaths in the area and a steady growth in employment opportunities. See the graph to the right for more details on El Dorado County's growing population from 1990 to 2015 (projected).

Total population is an estimate of the number of people living in a certain area, including incarcerated persons, residents working in other counties, and county residents in city annexations.

Total population is used to calculate the growth rate of a specific area. Public officials and business owners use these figures to determine where and how much people need their services. The growth rate is also used to calculate projections for population figures.

The three-year moving average is used in order to smooth out trends for areas of highly volatile data (data subject to frequent change). The three-year moving average makes erratic changes in trends less difficult to identify, and it is calculated by taking the average of the year in question, the previous year, and the following year.

Population: Cities

Population by city often gives a more accurate representation of the demographics of a particular area by showing population clusters within the area. Advertising companies and business owners use city population numbers to decide in which cities their particular businesses could thrive. Population growth by city also helps identify rapidly developing new markets.

Of the two incorporated cities in El Dorado County, the city of South Lake Tahoe was the most populous, with 23,600 people in 2004. However, the city of Placerville was the fastest growing incorporated city in the county, with an annual average population increase of 1.5 percent between 1994 and 2004. South Lake Tahoe follows, with an annual average increase of .4 percent during the same time. This is probably due to an increase in available housing in from 2001 to 2004. The following figures present population data by city from 1990 to 2004.

El Dorado County: Demographics

Age distribution information is most valuable to companies who target specific age groups in their advertising. The age distribution in a given area affects the area's school system, public services, and overall economy. An area with a large number of young children, for example, will be attractive to owners of toy stores, day cares, and family recreation parks.

Age distribution information is also used in conjunction with components of population change in order to make projected population estimates.

Population: Age Distribution

The largest age group in El Dorado County in 2004 was the 40-49 year-old range, with 31,714 people. This number represents approximately 18.5% of El Dorado County's population, which is over 3 percent higher than the statewide average. Since 1990, the number of people between the ages of 50-59 increased 6.9 percent, while those between 30-39 decreased 8.3 percent, causing a 4.7 percent decrease among children between 0-9. These trends may indicate that the number of jobs for those between 30-39 has declined, while those looking towards retirement are migrating into the area. Simultaneously, residents over 60 make up a higher percentage of the population in El Dorado County than the state average.

By 2015, the number of people between the ages of 10-19 and 40-49 is expected to decrease the most. Those between the ages of 60-69, followed by 20-29 year-olds, are projected to see the highest increase.

Population: Race/Ethnicity

Statistics regarding population by race and ethnicity are determined by what respondents to the U.S. Census consider as their primary ancestry. American Indian, Asian, black, and white are racial designations, while Hispanic is an ethnic designation that may be a mixture of white, black, and American Indian races. The Hispanic population was grouped separately in the census because many Hispanic people associated with their ethnicity rather than race. In this section, the five racial/ethnic groups are mutually exclusive.

Population by race statistics is used by grant writers and advertising companies to market products to a particular ethnic group. Grant writers use race/ethnicity information to determine whether investments in certain businesses are likely to be lucrative. Investing in an upstart radio station is a better investment in a pre-dominantly Hispanic area because statistics show that Hispanics listen to the radio for entertainment more than other ethnic groups.

Advertising companies use race/ethnicity data in order to make their advertisements appealing to the ethnic groups that are common in a given area. Government officials and political candidates also use race/ethnicity data in order to tailor their campaigns to distinct ethnic groups in certain locations.

Approximately 83.2% of residents in El Dorado County classified themselves as white in 2004.

Hispanics represented the next largest group, with 10.3 percent of the population, or 17,626 people, compared to 35.2 percent, or 12,816,038 people, in California. The Hispanic population is projected to increase 41 percent by 2015 in El Dorado County. Asians and American Indians are the next largest groups, with 4,650 and 2,154 people respectively, and blacks are the smallest census-classified group, with 1,064 people. By 2015, American Indians are projected to increase 90 percent, while whites are expected to increase 8 percent.

Population: Educational Attainment

Educational attainment information is used by businesses for market research, primarily by those wishing to target customers of a particular educational level. This information is also useful in determining the types of jobs that a particular area's economy is able to support.

Additionally, an area with a large number of college graduates usually translates into higher wage-earning potential and a more diverse buyer market.

Data here represents the number of people 18 years and over who have achieved a specified level of education.

In 2000, 31.5 percent of El Dorado County's residents, had some college but earned no degree, making them the largest educational group in the area. This rate is higher than the rest of the state in which 24.3 percent of all residents claim some college but have earned no degree. High School graduates and residents holding bachelor's degrees are the next most common educational groups in El Dorado County, at 23.5 and 16.7 percent, respectively.

El Dorado County is above the statewide average in residents holding high school diplomas, associate's degrees, and bachelor's degrees.

Population: Land Area & Density

Population density is used to define the differences between urban and rural areas. This distinction is necessary in grant writing and when comparing different counties or areas. Population density is determined by dividing the total population of the area in question by that area's size in square miles.

El Dorado County's total land area is 1,710.8 square miles. Because population has increased while land area has remained constant, El Dorado County's population density has steadily risen over time. As of 2004, the population density in the county was 98.3 residents per square mile, putting it well below the statewide average population density of 231.8 people per square mile. It is projected that by 2015 the population density in El Dorado County will reach 114 people per square mile.

Income: Total Personal & Medium Household

El Dorado County was $6.1 million in 2002, a 4.2 percent increase from the previous year. When income is adjusted for inflation, increases were approximately halved. Total personal income is expected to increase to $10.2 by 2010. This projection indicates an economy that is steadily growing, with a buyer market that will continue to gain spending power in the future. As the following figure shows, total personal income in El Dorado County has always been competitive with the statewide average. Median of income at which half of all families are above and half of all families are below. It is also a popular measure of a region's income level and is often used for researching funding opportunities.

However, median household income is not a major determinant of standard of living. It is possible for a region to have a high standard of living, but a low median household income. This could be due to a favorable environment or lower cost of living expenses, which can increase the quality of life.

The total median household income in El Dorado County in 1999 was $51,484, compared to $47,493 in California in the same year. The city of Placerville had the highest median household income in the county, at $36,454, and saw the highest increase between 1989 and 1999. El Dorado County's median household income was higher than the state average in 1999, indicating that its residents have more spending power than the average Californian.

Income influences buying and spending power and serves as a gauge for comparison to surrounding areas. Total personal income for El Dorado County rose by an annual average of 6.8 percent (4.5 percent when adjusted for inflation) between 1990 and 2002. Between 1989 and 1999, the median household income rose a total of 46.9 percent (9.3 percent when adjusted for inflation). During the same time, the poverty rate in El Dorado County fell 7.8 percent, from 7.7 percent to 7.1 percent. Transfer payments made up 11.1 percent of total personal income in 2002, slightly down from 11.2 percent in 1990. However, it is interesting to note that while the share of transfer payments fell, medical payments rose 8.8 percent. This increase can most likely be attributed to the rising costs of health care nationwide.

El Dorado County: Demographics

Sacramento offers one of California's fastest growing manufacturing and technology environments. Due to the high cost of living in the coastal communities, companies are moving their operations to Sacramento, and in increasing numbers, to El Dorado County itself.

This trend will be sure to continue, as the quality of life here is highly appreciated, and so companies come to realize that their employee base is more secure.

Government jobs in the city are innumerable; state, county, federal and city.

El Dorado County is popular with commuters from the city, who generally use hwy 50 to go down into the valley. Expansion of the highway is undergoing, and the future expansion plans will ensure a smooth, efficient drive.

El Dorado Hills features a new business park on its southern end which is quickly filling with a range of businesses, from insurance to high tech. There is plenty of land for future expansion.

Demographics: Labor Market

The labor market is a significant indicator of the economic and social condition of a community. It identifies labor trends in the area, defines the supply and demand for employment, and indicates the strengths of the businesses that are supporting that demand. From labor market information, conclusions can be drawn about the economic motivation of the county's population, the availability of jobs, the social climate of the area, and the standards of living.

In analyzing the status of a community's labor force, the following definitions may be helpful:

- Labor force is equal to employment plus unemployment.
- Employment refers to people working at least one hour per week.
- Unemployment refers to people working less than one hour per week, but actively seeking work during that week.

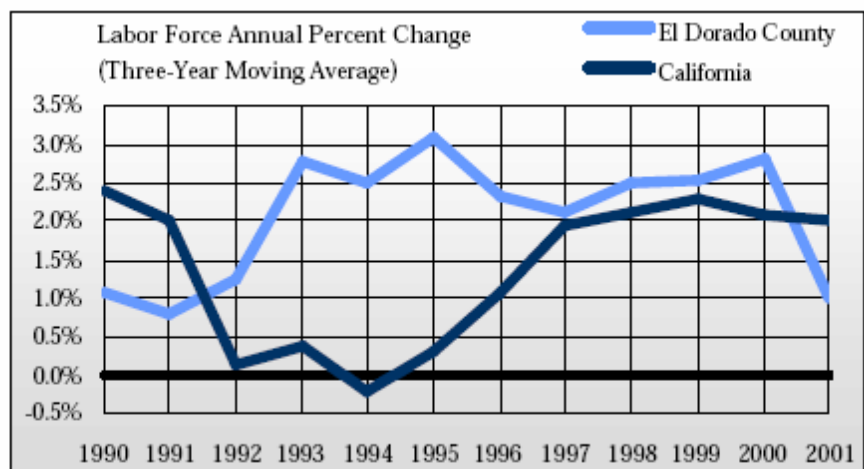

- Unemployment rate is equal to unemployment divided by labor force.

The U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics uses the twelfth of each month to determine a person's employment status. This date was originally chosen because at one time, there were no holidays in the week that included the twelfth. Although that may not be true now, mid-month time periods are less volatile to changes in the overall business climate.

The average unemployment rate in El Dorado County from 1990 to 2003 was 5.8 percent. Tracking monthly unemployment trends during that time revealed seasonal changes in the level of employment. In El Dorado County there have been, on average, significant declines in unemployment (increases in employment) from February through August. During this period, unemployment dropped, on average, from 6.7 percent to 5.1 percent, before it began to rise again. This may be largely driven by seasonal tourism and recreation-related jobs in the area.

There are approximately 9,900 travel-generated jobs in the area (12.3 of total employment), and it is a common trend for some of these jobs to disappear as the peak travel seasons of spring and summer begin to slow. The unemployment rate is likely stabilized by the large amount of winter recreation in the area. However, to assume that all of the gains during these periods are exclusive to recreation and tourism would be inaccurate. As people begin receiving income, they typically spend it on unrelated goods and services within their communities. As the demand increases for these goods and services, employment levels are expected to rise to meet the demand. In addition, timber and agriculture-related jobs are other factors relevant to employment trends.

Demographics: Labor Force

Increases in labor force indicate economic growth in an area, making the percentage of change in labor force from year to year important to prospective business owners looking for new areas in which to develop. In addition to employed workers and unemployed county residents actively seeking work, the labor force includes workers who have been laid off and are waiting to be called back to work.

In 2003, 82,600 residents, or 49.8 percent of El Dorado County's population, were members of the labor force, compared to 49 percent in California. The labor force has increased steadily over the last twenty years, with a 0.4 percent growth in 2003. By 2015, the labor force is projected to increase 23.4 percent, growing to 101,900 people. This steady increase indicates a thriving economy and a perpetual increase in available employment and business growth.

The city of South Lake Tahoe boasted the strongest labor force in El Dorado County, with 17,180 members in 2003 and a 29.4 percent growth between 1990 and 2003.

During the same time, the city of Placerville saw a 29.6 percent increase in the labor force—the highest in the county.

Comparatively, the state of California saw a 20.5 percent increase in the total labor force.

As of 2003, 78,200 members, or 94.7 percent of El Dorado

County's labor force, were employed, a 2.0 percent increase since the preceding year.

In comparison, 93.3 percent of California's total labor force was employed in the same year.

Employment in the county is expected to continue rising in upcoming years, with projected totals of 84,600 in 2010 and 89,800 by 2015. This steady growth in employment indicates an increase in spending power for the average worker in

El Dorado County and

ultimately means greater

economic strength for the county in the years to come. In the city of South Lake Tahoe, 15,940

members of the labor force

were employed as of 2003,

the highest number in any city in El Dorado County.

This total is followed by

4,430 employed residents

in the city of Placerville.

El Dorado County: Parks & Recreation

Parks & Recreation

El Dorado County is truly the great outdoors. The number of parks per capita is very high, and the quality of the parks is even more impressive.

Opportunities range from the Folsom Lake picnic spots to the Lake Tahoe wilderness trails. In between, are small lakes and reservoirs where camping, boating and hiking are extremely popular. Best of all, the huge number of parks means that the density of visitors is relatively low, so you can enjoy elbow room.

Golfing

The El Dorado and Sacramento area has undergone a fundamental transformation with regard to golf courses in the last ten years. It used to be difficult to find a good tee time; now it's the opposite. Not only is it easy to find good tee times, but also good deals. Golf courses must compete for every dollar they bring in; this goes for the high end courses like Rancho Murietta and Granite Bay to the municipal courses in the city. A number of country clubs offer a range of prices and quality. Serrano is the flagship of the county, with Cameron Park Country Club as a close second. Lake Tahoe offers a number of good courses as well; open during the summer.

Neighboring counties are also full of prime courses at good prices. The scenery is beautiful, so a fifty mile drive to a nearby course can be relaxing and perfect for those who like to make their round of golf a day long excursion.

Sports & Entertainment

The Sacramento Kings (and their counterparts the WNBA) are the major sports attraction in the area, but Sacramento State University and University of California at Davis also provide major university opportunities. Arco Arena not only houses the Kings but offers major concerts and other events like rodeos, circus, religious revivals, etc.

The AAA Rivercats play baseball at Raley Field, across the river from downtown Sacramento. Their games are very popular on a lazy summer evening; the quality of play is nearly as good as the majors but without the big ball park hassles.
